REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

A NEW BRITISH THRUST.

OBJECTIVES GAINED ON A WIDE FRONT.

Reported Shortage of German Big-Gun Ammunition.

London, October 12.
A German wireless official message states:—Between the Ly and the Ypres-Menin road firing increased suddenly. There was drum fire this morning. New enemy attacks then commenced on wide sectors. There is most intense artillery firing north-east of Soissons and east of the Meuse.

The Germans Again Surprised.

London, October 12.
Reuter's correspondent at the British Headquarters states:—British and Anzac troops to-day resumed progress, pushing the Germans off what remains of their foothold upon the great ridge system east of Ypres. The French to the left have not moved to-day, but their artillery is pounding the enemy vigorously. The weather has now improved and this afternoon there is a crisp breeze and a blue sky, but when the troops went forward the conditions were miserable. But although the ground was heavy, it was better than on the last attack. The Germans were again caught unexpectedly, for they could hardly have anticipated that we should again strike so soon, nor in such weather, but Sir Douglas Haig, whom I saw yesterday, was looking particularly well and wearing an air of complete satisfaction. He fully realises the value of time when the enemy is still staggering under the shock of previous blows.

The scheme of to-day's battle seems to be fraught with the most interesting possibilities; more than this I must not say. We have driven the Germans practically out of the whole depth of their defensive front over a width of several thousand yards. The result is that the Germans must now oppose us more than on any previous occasion since the first Battle of Ypres with flesh and blood instead of dug-outs, deep trenches and concrete redoubts. They are now shovelling and running up wire in feverish haste at the rear, but the dominant ridge enables us to see all this and to shell the workers with very disturbing effects. A "pill-box" takes a month to construct and cannot be built in wet or frosty weather. The barrage was more terrific than heretofore and crawled ahead of our leads this morning, scorching with incandescent coruscations every yard traversed. The enemy's artillery response was somewhat ragged. It is always dangerous to draw general conclusions from local symptoms, but many reports are current to the effect that the Germans are getting short of big-gun ammunition. Certainly their Army Orders invariably admonish, in heavy type, to husband this as much as possible. Recently the enemy had been firing at us some of our own shells captured from the Belgians. The fact that they are bringing these so far, in view of the great transport difficulties, is significant. It was reported at 7.40 this morning that our troops had gained their first objectives. Machine-gun fire appears to be the chief trouble, indicating that a large proportion of the German artillery has been withdrawn well to the rear.

Our airmen are up in great strength, doing splendidly, especially in directing artillery fire on large bodies of marching troops. Some tanks were seen, but no reports in connection with these are available.

GERMAN BOMBAST.

More Threats to England.

London, October 12.
Reuter's correspondent at Amsterdam says that the Reichstag has adjourned until December 5. The President, in his concluding speech, exhorted the people not to lose their nerve.

General von Hindenburg, replying to the German National Chamber of Commerce, said:—"England's navy has closed the door of international commerce, but she shall feel the sharpness of the sword until she perishes."

Admiral Scheer, replying to the Stenhal Peace Committee, said:—"Your confidence inspires the U boat men, and we shall ensure that the British shall never again dare to pick a quarrel."

Herr Hertling, speaking in the Bavarian Diet, remarked that "the British were hard-headed, calculated business men, but they were also beginning to doubt whether war was a paying business." Vorwaerts declares that Dr. Michaelis, after the recent scenes in the Reichstag, is finally impossible as Chancellor.

EX-TSAR AND FAMILY IN A MONASTERY.

London, October 12.
Reuter's correspondent at Petrograd says that the ex-Tsar and family have been transferred to a monastery in the vicinity of Tobolsk, as the ex-Tsar complained of the curiosity of crowds day and night surrounding the house at Tobolsk, which was without a garden.

FRENCH PACIFISTS PUNISHED.

London, October 12.
Reuter's correspondent at Paris says that six persons have been sentenced from four months to two years' imprisonment for distributing pacifist pamphlets.

COSSACK DEMANDS.

London, October 12.
Reuter's correspondent at Petrograd says that a conference of the Cossacks has formulated demands including that Cossacks shall no longer be used as police for political purposes and an increase in the number of Cossack representatives in the preliminary Parliament.

IN THE BALKANS.

London, October 12.
A German wireless official message states:—There is intense artillery fire in the Monastir basin and at the Cerna Bend.

MORE RUSSIAN SUCCESSES.

London, October 12.
A Russian wireless official message states:—We counter-attacked and restored our position south of the Pakov high road. The enemy took several trenches in the Buzova region. In a counter-attack were re-captured them. We drove out Turks from a height south of Urmia.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

COUNT LUXBURG ARRESTED.

London, October 12.
Reuter's correspondent at Buenos Aires says that Count Luxburg, who was awaiting an opportunity to depart, evaded surveillance and attempted to flee to the interior. He was arrested and his luggage seized. Count Luxburg protested and implored the authorities. He was taken back to Buenos Aires.

GERMAN SHAMEN SENTENCED IN AMERICA.

London, October 12.
Reuter's correspondent at Charleston, South Carolina, says that three of the crew of the German steamer Liebenfels, which was sunk at her anchorage in January, have been sentenced to two years' imprisonment and fined one thousand dollars for a conspiracy to sink the ship.

NEW YORK PLOT FRUSTRATED.

London, October 12.
Reuter's correspondent at New York says that a plot to export tungsten on board a Scandinavian liner has been frustrated by the arrest of a steward and two local Swedes. Two hundred pounds of tungsten were found concealed on the liner.

AN AMERICAN EXPORT PRECAUTION.

London, October 12.
Reuter's correspondent at New York says that a Tanners' Alliance has been formed, on the suggestion of the Government, to control the export of hides and skins, in order to prevent them reaching enemy destinations.

BRITISH REQUISITION SCHEME.

London, October 12.
It is believed that forty Swedish vessels alone are affected by the British Government's scheme of requisitioning British-owned ships registered under a neutral flag now lying in British ports. Four have already been taken over.

NAVAL AIRMEN AGAIN BUSY.

London, October 12.
The Admiralty announces that, despite the weather, naval aircraft dropped many bombs on Sperdahlhoek aerodrome yesterday. All our machines returned.

TRIBUTE TO RED CROSS WORK.

London, October 12.
Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig has written to the Chairman of the Red Cross and St. John Societies in connection with the "Our Day" appeal on the 18th instant, expressing gratitude at the admirable work they are doing with the Expeditionary Force, whether in transporting wounded or in supplying a host of comforts to men in hospital. He says their work is performed zealously, devotedly and efficiently, while their aid rendered to the Medical Corps is beyond all praise. Sir Douglas hopes that there is no risk of their splendid work being curtailed through lack of funds.

POST-WAR TRADE PLANS.

London, October 12.
The Press Bureau announces that Dr. Addison has appointed a Committee to report on questions connected with the securing and distributing of raw materials required for British industries for the purpose of restoring and developing trade after the war.

EARLIER TELEGRAMS.

OUR PLEDGE TO FRANCE.

London, October 11.
Mr. Lloyd George, addressing an Insurance and Friendly Societies deputation, said that no statement was more calculated to prolong the terrible war than Herr Kuehlmann's utterance in the Reichstag. As regards no concessions concerning Alsace-Lorraine, however long the war lasts, he intended to stand by our gallant ally France until she redeems her oppressed children from the degradation of a foreign yoke. This means that we must husband our resources and incur no obligations beyond the strictest necessities of the hour.

BETTER WEATHER IN FLANDERS.

London, October 12.
Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig reports: Improved weather and good visibility have favoured the work of the artillery. There has been much effective counter-battery work on the battle front besides bombardments of the enemy's positions and a harassing fire against his communications and back areas. Hostile artillery has been less active. A further seventy-seven prisoners were brought in without infantry action.

Our aeroplanes on Wednesday bombed a German big gun position. Three enemy machines were brought down and two driven down. Four of ours are missing.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR'S RETIREMENT FORESHADOWED.

Amsterdam, October 12.
The inspired Berlin correspondent of the "Cologne Volkszeitung" expects the early retirement of Dr. Michaelis and states that either Herr Kuehlmann or von Bulow will succeed him.

GERMAN POTATOES FOR DENMARK.

Copenhagen, October 12.
The Foreign Minister announced an agreement whereby considerable quantities of potatoes are being imported from Germany.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

MR. ASQUITH'S WAR SPEECH.

The Danger of an Inconclusive Peace.

London, October 11.
Mr. Asquith speaking on war aims at a meeting at Liverpool, said plain questions had been asked Germany which were studiously evaded. Concrete cases of primary importance and perfect simplicity had been put but were not answered: We were asked to lay down our arms without any other safeguard or satisfaction than that we would be offering an unique exhibition of the virtues of faith, hope and charity. Our governing objects are the attainment of a real peace and an effective prevention of future war. None of our demands for territorial readjustments involved aggressive annexation, not even the restoration to France of Alsace-Lorraine.

Replying to the last speech of Herr Kuehlmann, who said that Germany will never make the concession of Alsace-Lorraine because she must safeguard her glorious inheritance, Mr. Asquith said that glorious inheritance was a territory French in sympathy. It was filched from France, against the protests of the greatest German statesmen and without regard to the wishes of the inhabitants, to be held as a symbol of French humiliation. This act of crude and short-sighted spoliation was the root-source of the present war.

German diplomacy was not celebrated for deftness, but its annals did not contain a more clumsy and more transparent manoeuvre than the maladroit attempt to sow discord between ourselves and the French as regards Alsace-Lorraine.

Herr Kuehlmann's continued silence on the plain questions put to him concerning the future of Belgium was significant. There was nothing in our proposed changes in the map to offend the German people. It had never been part of our policy to annihilate or mutilate Germany. Prussian militarism was the real enemy; hence the worst that could happen would be a patched-up peace merely giving a breathing space for another struggle.

Recently, I walked through Delville Wood, perhaps the most tragic spot on the Somme battlefield; another day along what were the streets of ancient Ypres. It is impossible to conceive more terrible object-lessons of the meaning of modern warfare. Yet, with the pitiless desolation fresh in my mind, I would rather see the war continue than be brought to an end by an inconclusive compromise. If it is to be a contest of endurance we have no reason to lose heart. There is not the faintest danger of our being starved into submission, while aerially we shall soon master the aeroplane raids as we mastered the Zeppelin. Take the Allies as a whole, not forgetting America, survey the relative powers of endurance, make the enemy every allowance for untoward contingencies and there is no doubt the material and moral preponderance rests increasingly with our cause.

BRAZIL AND THE WAR.

Supplies for the Allies.

A Brazilian correspondent writes to the Times as follows:—

In recent enumerations of the Allied countries the name of Brazil has often been omitted. Though technically justified, inasmuch as Brazil is not yet an Ally and hardly an active belligerent, the omission scarcely does justice to the position she has taken up and to her readiness to do all in her power to assist the Allied cause.

A telegram from Rio de Janeiro, published in the Times of August 4, stated that the Brazilian Government disposed of 16 naval units for policing the South Atlantic. It added that a Government Bill was in the Committee stage for a special appropriation of £10,000,000 for the Army and Navy, and that the enrolment of volunteers was increasing. Perhaps the best description of the Brazilian position is that given by the Foreign Minister, Senhor Nilo Pecanha, on May 23:—"Brazil is not declaring war on anybody—Brazil is defending herself. It is Germany who has declared war on all neutrals."

The facts are that from the beginning the sympathies of true Brazilians have been with the Allies, and especially with France; and that though the justice of the Allied cause has undoubtedly appealed as strongly to Brazilians as to the rest of the world, their sympathies with France are so deep that their hearts would have gone out to her had her cause been less manifestly the cause of humanity than it is. When I say "true Brazilians," I do not include, at least as far as the mass is concerned, the large German population that inhabits the provinces of Santa Catharina, Parana, and Rio Grande do Sul. Though many of these German colonies are doubtless loyal to the land of their adoption, to which they or their fathers came to escape the blittings of German military rule, it might be said to regard all, or even the majority of them as unalloyed supporters of Brazilian policy. Kind German propaganda has been busy among them. Portraits of the Kaiser and of other Teutonic worthies decorate the walls of their public buildings and of many private houses. They have been kept well supplied with German news and views of the war, and, not unnaturally, feel some pride in the resistance of Germany to a world of enemies. But apart from some minor disturbances, in the suppression of which the Brazilian authorities taught them a lesson, these German Brazilians have hitherto given little trouble, and seem scarcely to present a serious danger to the State. They are hardworking and thrifty, and are by no means averse from disposing of their produce even to Allied purchasers.

It is, indeed, as a source of supply that Brazil should be able to render the greatest services to the Allies in the immediate future. Without prejudice to the naval and military help she may be able to give if and when called upon, her resources as a producer of coffee, rubber, cotton, leather, meat, beans, hard woods, manganese ores, and other commodities should be extremely valuable, not to mention wheat, of which the cultivation is being rapidly extended. Several Allied commissions are already at work in Brazil organising the purchase of supplies. It is greatly to be desired that a competent British commission should be added to their number, and that its operations should be co-ordinated with those of the other commissions under official auspices, as is now being successfully done in the United States. It is important from every point of view that the blunder frequently committed in the United States early in the war, when Allied commissions bid against each other and forced up prices to a ruinous level, should not be repeated in Brazil. No time ought to be lost in taking this matter vigorously in hand and in sending out British representatives to reinforce those of other Allied Governments.

Incidentally, a great advantage that might be derived from the work of Allied commissions, if they be composed of competent men, would be the acquisition of fuller knowledge of the immense resources of Brazil and the development of relationships that may be invaluable reciprocally after the war. As far as Great Britain is concerned, trade with Brazil has in the past suffered from the fact that so many firms fail to remember that in Brazil the language is different from that of the rest of South America, while the people's tastes and customs are also entirely different. The Spanish-speaking traveller who knows the Argentine is too often told to extend his journey into Brazil, whereas to ensure success the services of a man knowing the country and the language are essential. This must be changed after the war, if British trade is not merely to hold its own but to increase its footing in the Brazilian Republic.

As I have said, sentiment counts for much in Brazil. The fact that the British Empire has stood so gallantly by France in this war will tend to render British subjects even more welcome than they have been in the past. Closer commercial relations should bring about a better political understanding—and this in the case of a nation now numbering 25,000,000 souls is not a factor to be lost sight of. Brazilians have, moreover, learned many a useful lesson during the war. They have reason to be chary of German "friendliness"; and the fact that when the moment came to overthrow their Krupp field artillery and ammunition, both guns and shells were found to be sadly defective, has not increased their belief in German good faith. Their attitude was accurately represented in the vote on the revocation of the declaration of neutrality, when only three Deputies voted against the revocation. Of these three, only one was deliberately pro-German. While it is evident that a sense of solidarity with the United States largely influenced the attitude of Brazilian politicians, it is also clear that their support of the official policy was prompted by a desire that Brazil should take a definite stand in the world-war and should register her claim to be a non-combatant among the modern and progressive nations working for the general welfare of humanity. Brazil is intensely modern, and is accessible to all forms of modern development. If the war has brought her into the main current of world events, it has also opened an opportunity for the nations by whose side she stands to play to their own advantage. A political organisation of the future

GENERAL NEWS.

Liebknecht said to be Dying.
Travellers who arrived from Berlin recently state that it is rumoured that Herr Liebknecht is dying in his prison hospital. Liebknecht was last reported as being employed by the prison authorities as a shoemaker.

Handkerchiefs as Serviettes.
Because of the shortage of paper, the German authorities have decided to cancel a formal order that linen napkins should be replaced by paper ones. The people are asked, when possible, to use their handkerchiefs as table napkins.

Jackey's Lost $6,000 a Year.
Said to have been an "one time" in receipt of $8,000 a year as Jackey, John, Floyd, pleaded guilty at London Sessions to theft. At the outbreak of the war, Floyd was facing at Chantilly in France, and he came to London with about $500. During the last nine months, it was alleged, he had obtained goods by fraud in the West-end. There were about 30 cases, and the value of the goods involved was about £220. Sentence was postponed that Floyd might undergo a fresh medical examination for the Army.

War Bread and Heart Beats.
Sir James Mackenzie, the eminent specialist in cardiac disease, made an interesting statement in the witness-box at Bow Street recently. Mr. Cecil Hayes, one of the counsel engaged in what is known as the "doping" of recruits case, asked if heart irregularities could not be caused by eating war-time bread. Sir James: "Any digestive disturbance might cause irregularity of the heart's action. The effect of dry thyroid, which was alleged to have been administered, would, he added, be to increase the heart-beats."

Laver or Sea-Moss Bread.
The sea-moss on the Irish coast, called by some "slack," is really laver. In Ireland it is called "sloucan" (with the "o" hard), and "sloucan" for brevity. In Ireland, as in England, it is prepared by washing, to get rid of sand, etc., and then boiling. When boiled a little butter or bacon fat is added, and a dash of lemon juice completes the preparation. It is eaten with fish, and by some with mutton, instead of jelly. In Wales a great deal of laver is used, mostly in the form of "laver bread." The boiled-laver is mixed with a proportion of oatmeal, and shaped into round cakes. "Laver bread," or "lava bread," as it seems to be pronounced, is on sale in all the Welsh markets anywhere conveniently near the coast.

Future of British Farming.
The improvement of agriculture was the subject of discussion at a conference of Scottish agriculturalists at Edinburgh recently. The Earl of Selborne said it had become a question not of this or that conflicting policy, but of national security and existence, and the reason was, and he wanted this fact to sink into the minds of his fellow-countrymen, that they were no longer in the military sense an island. If any such calamity as that of 1914 befell them again, and they were in the same position as they were in 1914 in an agricultural sense, they would be a beaten people before the war began. Lord Selborne went on to say that as between tariff and guarantee the policy of guarantee was preferred, because it fell on the whole body of taxpayers. A tariff on food was really felt most by those who were poorest, and it would be a very difficult thing to convince their urban population of the justice of imposing on them a tariff for this purpose. One of their strongest recommendations would be that the agricultural committee of the County Councils should be made statutory and permanent, and that they should be composed of persons thoroughly conversant with the condition of agriculture, and not only of County Councillors. They were only at the beginning of agricultural education and research, and he contrasted what was spent in the year preceding the war in this country on this subject compared with Canada, France, Russia, and the United States.

GENERAL NEWS.

Mr. E. D. Morel's Nationality.

Born in France, the son of a French father and a British mother, Mr. E. D. Morel, said the Home Secretary in Parliament recently, became in 1896 a British subject by naturalization. —Sir John Rees: May I ask if this is the same Mr. Morel who was a professional promoter of ill-feeling between Belgium and Great Britain before the war, and a notorious atrocity-monger? (Oh! oh!) Mr. Ponsbury: Did not Mr. Morel receive remarkable public recognition of his work in connection with the Congo? The Speaker: We are not dealing with reputations.

Woman Smoker's Death.

At an inquest at Southwark on Ellen Baxter, 28, who died suddenly, the husband said his wife was a heavy cigarette smoker. She smoked a packet every night. He did not know what she smoked during the day when he was at work, but she smoked three packets on Sunday. She was very alarmed at the air raid on Sunday, and said she was certain the raids would be the death of her. Dr. Elwyn, who made a post-mortem examination, said the valves of the woman's heart were diseased. He could not say for certain, but the excessive smoking was a possible explanation of the dilation of the heart. Death was due to syncope. The jury returned a verdict of "Death from natural causes."

Labour M. P. Mobbed.

Mr. Thomas Richardson, the Labour M. P. for Whitehaven, arrived in the borough recently intending to hold an open-air meeting in the Market Place, but when he and his agent appeared they had a very rough reception. They were pelted with mud, and there were cries of "Put him in the dock!" This was followed by a rush for Mr. Richardson, who was roughly handled, but eventually escaped to the house of Mr. J. B. Hanton, the local miners' agent. For some hours a large crowd awaited him, and all the windows of the house were wrecked. Several people as well as members of the police force were struck by stones. The door of the house was forced, but a search revealed that Mr. Richardson and his agent had escaped.

The Speaker and Conscientious Objectors.

Miss M. E. Waid, Penrith, the secretary of the Cumberland Non-Conscription Fellowship, recently sent to the Speaker a resolution passed at a meeting of the N.C.F. protesting against "the prosecution of conscientious objectors," and demanding their release from prison and penal conditions as "contrary to the principles of liberty and justice, and unnecessary in the interests of the nation." Acknowledging the resolution, Mr. Lowther's secretary says:—"The Speaker desires me to say that he has no sympathy whatever with men who will make no sacrifices, nor stir a finger to assist their country in its hour of peril, but are content to let others suffer and die for them, while they sit at home at ease, and profit from the necessities of the country."

Hon. Francis Patrick Clements, Stoker.

The will has been proved of the Hon. Francis Patrick Clements, of Eggesford House, Devon, who died on or since May 21, 1907, at some place unknown, intestate, a bachelor without father, a son of the fourth Earl of Leitrim. He was not possessed of real estate, and the estate is valued at £20,098. His mother, the Countess of Leitrim, has renounced administration of the estate, which has accordingly been granted to his brother, the present Earl of Leitrim, of 60a Cadogan Square, W. The Hon. F. P. Clements disappeared ten years ago. When last heard of he was working as a stoker on a vessel bound for New York from Southampton in May, 1907. No clue to his subsequent fate has ever been discovered. His death leaves the present Earl of Leitrim without an heir to his title. His father, the late Earl, was murdered in an agrarian outrage in Ireland.

HONGKONG, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1917.

THE BRITISH RED CROSS FUND.

In less than a week from now,—to be precise, on "Our Day," which is to be held on the 18th instant—the generosity of the Hongkong public will again be put to the test. That the public will not fail to respond cordially, we have not the slightest doubt, as there have been many occasions since the war began in which they have proved their readiness to dip deeply into their pockets in the cause of sweet charity. The present occasion is one which should specially appeal to all classes of the public, as the support asked will be for one of the best known, as it is one of the most deserving, of the great institutions that is doing so much good towards ameliorating the hardships and the sufferings of our soldiers in the war. Then the British Cross and Order of St. John of Jerusalem—to give it its full name—there is probably no organisation, directly or indirectly in the war, that is undertaking so gigantic a task or one that is so valuable as it is necessary.

Not only does this society take charge of wounded men; it has also taken charge of prisoners of war. The enormous amount of duties thus devolving upon it is practically incalculable, necessitating not only vast and continuous work by thousands of men and women, but the expenditure of an immense amount of money. Details are not only interesting and instructive, but they are impressive. Let us therefore consider for moment what are the charges of the British Red Cross. They amount to £50,000 a week or £5 a minute, and this total, it will be readily understood, tends rather to increase than to diminish. That it is conducted on sound business lines is sufficiently illustrated by the fact that administration expenses during the year ending October 20, 1916, amounted to only 2.92 per cent. or sevenpence in the pound. Day by day and at all times the Society's work goes on regularly and steadily in England and in every theatre of the war. Not only are the requirements of our own wounded or sick cared for, but the wounded and sick of other Allied countries are likewise succoured, as the good work done by the Society in Serbia and Montenegro abundantly testifies. The Society has spent three quarters of a million sterling in Mesopotamia, Egypt, India, Salonica, Malta and the Near East. It maintains 2,500 motor ambulances, cars, cycles, soup kitchens, etc., and has spent $1,100,000 on their purchase and upkeep. It has four hospital trains running in France, each carrying 450 wounded. It has twenty-two hospitals and convalescent homes in France and the East, besides the huge St. John Brigade Hospital at Etaples with its 520 beds. It has spent £10,000 in building and equipping recreation and refreshment rooms in France, and has twelve branch offices specially charged with inquiries for wounded and missing. Last, but not least, this great Society, has spent £1,800,000 on surgical dressings, hospital equipment, necessities and comforts of all kinds despatched mainly abroad.

Still more is needed. And it is because of the realisation of this, together with the fact that the work done is being most efficiently performed, that those in charge of Hongkong's "Our Day" festivities have again set to work with a will for the benefit of the British Red Cross. Next Thursday the public will be asked to do their part, and we have no doubt that the appeal will receive a most hearty response.

The German Naval Mutiny.

Yesterday's telegrams referred in fuller detail to the revelations referred to in our Thursday's issue regarding the mutiny in the German Navy. Quite a lot, it would appear, is being made in Germany regarding Dr. Michaelis' statement; but one does not require to be particularly familiar with the methods of the German Government to realise the fact that the affair has been divulged in the manner it has been simply and solely for political purposes. Indeed certain German papers do not hesitate to say so without ambiguity, but on the contrary, they do so with a directness and force that marks a striking contrast in the attitude of the German Press, compared with what pertained previous to the war. From the so-called "revelations," the essential points to be gathered are that three deputies belonging to the Independent Socialists endeavoured to conduct some sort of propaganda by which they hoped to enlist the sympathies of the sailors of the German Navy. The deputies are stated to have denied that their proposals were "revolutionary" and to have declared that they had a perfect right to speak to the sailors regarding their conditions. If, as seems to have been the case, it was found necessary to punish certain sailors regarding the matter, it logically follows that those inciting them should likewise be punished. But, as stated, the whole affair seems a rather transparent and clumsy attempt on the part of the Government to hide its own deficiencies behind its machinations against certain political antagonists who, doubtless, are making themselves objectionable—and probably not without good cause—to the "All Highest" and his sycophantic satellite.

A Difference.

The arrangement by which General Maurice is enabled to issue a weekly review of the war outlook is one which is serving a most useful purpose. We all know the uses to which the enemy puts the Press, and though we have no desire to see British newspapers utilised for the purposes of misleading the public with utter lies, there is much to be gained by the publication of stated periods of authoritative statements regarding our progress in the various spheres of war activity. Happily, we are in position of being well able to tell the whole truth, for victory is with us and every fact made public is a record of our steady and unbroken successes. Only the losing side needs to take refuge in falsehoods, and that is why the Germans to-day have to distort the news in order to keep up the spirits of the people.

Encouraging Facts.

The latest review of the situation by General Maurice is decidedly encouraging, from every point of view. Especially is it so in regard to the relative British and German casualties in the recent fighting. Ordinarily, one would have thought that the attacking side would be the one to suffer the heaviest losses, for the advantages of being on the defensive are obvious. In this war, however, we find a reversal of customary happenings. We are the side which is steadily advancing, yet we have it on definite assurance that the German losses are 75 per cent. heavier than ours. This is a wonderful tribute to our superior strategy, but above all it contains the germ of absolute eventual victory. Perhaps most reassuring of all is the fact that the U-boats are absolutely powerless for war purposes. General Maurice says that they have not delayed one hour our plans in France, nor have they kept back a single round of ammunition. That is a most striking and suggestive fact and at the same time a wonderful tribute to our command of the seas. But the end is not yet. General Maurice does not hesitate to say that there is hard fighting ahead. We know that full well, but the point is that we are better prepared for it than are the Germans. America's military strength will be a big factor when it is thrown into the scale. That is why Germany wants peace before that time arrives.

Temptation Too Great.
A Chinese was charged before Mr. J. R. Wood, at the Police Court this morning, with stealing $1,708 in Chinese 20 cent pieces, the property of the Chinese Bank in Wing Lok Street. Mr. Davidson appeared on his behalf and pleaded guilty, saying he had nothing more to say in extenuation than that the evidence of the Police showed the money was lying about and it was a great temptation. His Worship sent defendant to prison for six months' hard labour.

The Hon. the Secretary for Chinese Affairs has been appointed by the Governor to wind up the said Society.

A Noteworthy Honour.
In connection with the conferring of the Third Class Order of the Excellent Crop on Mr. Ho Kwong, which we announced yesterday, we understand that there are only two other Hongkong merchants who have been similarly honoured—the Hon. Mr. Lan Chu-pak and Mr. Ho Kung-tong, while Sir Robert Ho Tung is the only holder in Hongkong of the Second Class Order. The two last-named are uncles of Mr. Ho Kwong, who is the fourth son of Mr. Ho Fook. We join with many others in congratulating Mr. Ho Kwong on being made the recipient of this mark of esteem by the President of China.

1892.

HONGKONG TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

(Compiled from the "Hongkong Telegraph" files for the week ending October 20, 1892.)

The Dollar.
Oct. 13.—"The rate of the dollar on demand to day is 2/8 1/2."

Loss of the Bokhara.
Oct. 14.—"It gives us great pleasure to learn that the General Managers of the Douglas Steamship Company have taken practical steps to do their utmost in searching for the missing mail steamer Bokhara. And unlike the Royal Naval Yard authorities; didn't ask for the cost of the coals to be guaranteed before they started to save, if possible, the lives of a large number of their fellow-creatures." (Later news shows that the Bokhara foundered, several Hongkong cricketers losing their lives).

Oct. 15.—"The Daily Press petulant was unchained last night, and perpetrated a leader, which appears in the morning's Daily Reg. He says:—'A robbery that is compatible with peace of mind, mutual respect, the most amicable feelings, seems to hurt nobody.' This, then, is the reason why our morning contemporary every day steals our columns, the product of our gigantic brains inspired by the combined genius of the greatest men on earth! The D. P. amiable robber then goes on to say:—'the best way with Chinese servants is to remember that they are men of like nature with ourselves.' Confession is good for soul. We always thought it was Granny's ricksha coolie who wrote the leaders that illuminate Hongkong with the light of innocent merriment. Granny, you've earned the diadem."

For empty-headed parrots—The gorgeous emblematic gem Of cabbages and carrots.
Typhoons.
Oct. 15.—"It was in the smoking room of a Trans-Pacific steamer that a worthy Teuton was talking about the Hongkong typhoons, and warnings of them. 'Look here,' he said, 'I tell you what it is. You better don't take no stock in dem refter predictions. Old Dobree can't tell no petter as I can.' 'But, my dear sir,' said a person standing by 'he foretold the typhoon which we have just encountered.' 'Vell, dat ish so,' said the Teuton; 'but I tell you wat it is, dat typhoon would have come just de same if it have not been predicted.'"

Growing Our Own Bobbies!
Oct. 15.—"A marriage is, we believe, arranged between one of our best sporting Police Officers and the daughter of one of the same fraternity on the retired list; this will eventually save a lot of money for the Colony for if all our guardians of the Peace do the same, they will be able to grow their own 'bobbies' instead of capturing them in the Highlands."

A Complaint.
Oct. 19.—"When first it became certain that the Bokhara was not safe, and that those on board might be in serious danger, perhaps in need of help or perhaps beyond assistance, from that time, thousands of anxious friends and relatives were, hour by hour, more and more tortured by the unsatisfied longing for news of those they loved; a number of persons, chiefly in the P. and O. and Naval services, controlled the sources of information, and from the first did their level best to check off all questions, to keep the public in ignorance by hook or by crook, as long as possible. The subordinate officers in each case could not help themselves, of course—they had to obey orders; but the officious idiots who issued the closure instructions—what of them? What possible excuses have they for their rigid, wooden, dog-in-the-manger policy? Why did they refuse to let people know all that concerned their unfortunate friends? Why were the P. and O. so reticent about the negotiations for sending the Portuguese ordered to give 'absolutely no information to anybody' on their return? It made no difference, however; the dog in the manger was a very wooden dog indeed, for it kept nobody away."

THE WAR LOTTERY.

[To the Editor of the "Hongkong Telegraph."]

Sir,—One word more, please—the parson's privilege. Your correspondent, in what seems intended for his closing letter, says something about "silly words." I don't think he has used any, and am at a loss to imagine where he finds them in anything I have written.

It is true I allowed myself to poke a little quiet fun at him—under the stroke of anonymity and authoritative correction I think that may pass for a "well permitted recreation."

But anger: Good gracious, no! My friend did go beyond bounds, if he will allow me to say so, in his gibe about the commands of God and others alleged to proceed from me, but I took it that it was the rhetorical current which had carried him past good taste.

Unless my surmise is mistaken I am dealing with a brother cleric of a different fold as well as a different nation. If so, I should the more regret to close our little discussion with anything short of entire good feeling, and in any case will beg him to believe that there has been and is no anger on my side any more than I attribute it to his.

Yours, etc.,
J. KIRK MACONACHIE.

"OUR DAY."

Big Prizes in Raffles.

Among other attractions on the Murray Parade Ground there will be a 20 cents stall, containing over a thousand prizes presented by the Portuguese firms in Hongkong, one of whom has also presented a new Maxwell 5 passenger, 4-cylinder touring car which is now being raffled. There will also be a $1 raffle, including the following special prizes:—
One Woodstock typewriter presented by Messrs. De Souza & Co.
One L. O. Smith typewriter presented by Messrs. Botelho Bros.
One lot special cigars presented by the Hongkong Cigar Store.
One pair of silver vases presented by Messrs. Wing On and Co.
Chinese porcelain presented by the Sun Company.
One pair of silver vases presented by the Sincere Company.
A portfolio of war engravings presented by Messrs. Kelly and Walsh.
Silver mounted lavender water bottle presented by Messrs. A. S. Watson and Co., Ltd.
The tickets for the $1 raffle, and a limited number of official photographs of the King's visit to the Front and other war scenes will be sold on the ground.

Snatcher Sentenced.
A Chinese was charged before Mr. A. Dyer Ball, at the Police Court this morning, with stealing a bangle from the arm of a child who was being carried by a woman in Bonham Strand yesterday. It was stated that the defendant came up behind and, snatching the bangle from the child, made off. He was, however, caught and this morning was sent to prison for six months, with hard labour.

Every newspaper in the Colony obtained full information, though not every one had the ability to do it justice. Still, the fact remains that 'though orders may be orders, yet we got there just the same.'

Shipping Charges.
Oct. 20.—"Captain T. Hall will, we note, take the Douglas Co.'s steamer Formosa out of port to-morrow, vice Captain B. Borthurst, who takes over command of the same company's steamer Thales from Mr. A. E. Hodgins, the acting commander."

TO-DAY'S MISCELLANY.

The Kaiser expected Japan to declare war against the Entente, did he? Then he is madder than any of us had thought. It was Germany who egged Russia on to war with the "yellow pagans," as the Teutons had it. It was Germany who drew up the Russian plan of campaign against the island Empire. It was the German Emperor who described Russia as "fighting the white man's cause against the 'yellow peril'—and fighting it miserably." It was the German Emperor who sought to inflame America against Japan by declaring that our Ally would soon make war on the Republic. And did he think that Japan forgot Kisooban—and Germany.

The Him of Hate is Herr Gerard in Germany to-day. There were a thousand reasons for treating him with surface politeness while he was there, but, as they never forgive who did the wrong—to our prisoners—as they loathed him for his goodness to those suffering captives. Bismarck really hated as for 1870: "The representation of France in North Germany was undertaken in London with a readiness which was at least mortifying to us; and during the war England never compromised herself so far in our favour as thereby to endanger her friendship with France—on the contrary." But our instinct was right in 1870, as Mr. Gerard's in 1914-17.

Nothing in the exposure will be more hateful to the German Emperor's subjects than his reluctant tribute to ourselves:—"The English are an obstinate nation; they will keep up the war; they have changed the whole situation." Napoleon had reason to take precisely the same view. "The English are inferior to us, yet they best us," he fumed. And, speaking of Waterloo, he said: "It was the good discipline of the English that gained the day. They could advance 30 yards, halt, fire, go back, fire, and come forward 30 yards without breaking their line, all without disorder."

Sir Arthur Yapp, of the Y. M. C. A., has been one of the valuable discoveries of the war. He had been the secretary of the Manchester Y.M.C.A., housed in a splendid building, until shortly before the war when he was appointed to his London post. The instant war broke out Mr. Yapp summoned all the leaders of the Y.M.C.A. and outlined a great scheme of hats. Some folks thought the money would not be forthcoming, but his faith in the British public has proved well founded, and long ago the first million pounds was passed. Sir Arthur had a curious experience the other day. He chanced to ask a soldier where he came from, and he named his own birthplace. "What is your name?" he next asked. "Yapp," was the answer! Yet Yapp is uncommon.

The Kaiser is devoting some of his leisure to the creation of a war library of his own, and it is said to have reached its ten thousandth volume. His collection of photographs had got to that stage already after six months of war. While the books come from every country, only German photographs are included, and those of William II. himself are said to be "numerous" and of particular interest. The war collection of the Royal Library of Berlin now numbers 50,000 volumes, and they are bound in special covers of grey, stamped with the Prussian eagle. The future historian will not suffer from lack of material.

A working mother in the North of England writes "Yanoc" in the Referee said to me in the second year of the War. "A bad War! I don't think. Thirty bob a week allowance comes in regular, and I got rid of a bad 'aching.' Other people have like reasons to think it a good War. A firm connected with the purchase and the sale of silver has notified, I am informed, twelve millions sterling since August 4, 1914. Two other financial firms of like extraction dealing in the same commodity have, likewise, made enormous fortunes."

WAR COMFORTS.

Per Parcel Post to Lieut. H. C. Clements, 101 Machine Gun Co., Egyptian Expeditionary Force, Egypt.—68 pairs socks.

Letters of Acknowledgement.

The following is an extract from a letter from Mrs. G. Gibson, General Manager Surgical Branch of Q. M. N. G., London:—I am writing to thank you for your magnificent gift to our organisation. I enclose official receipt. I assisted to unpack the cases and it gave me very great pleasure to sort out all the beautiful things which your kind workers have made for our soldiers. Will you be good enough to thank them all? What wonderful materials you get out there.

From 2nd Division (R. P.) Comforts Fund, Dandridge, Marise, Punjab, India:—I am directed by General Banbury and the Committee of the 2nd Division (Rawalpindi) Comforts Fund to ask you to thank the workers of "Our Little Bit Society" for their most generous gifts (60 pairs socks and 247 milk covers) to the troops on active service. The men will much appreciate the kind thought that has prompted the workers to send such useful things.—Yours truly, (Signed) B. E. Robertson, Hon. Sec.

From 53rd General Hospital, B. E. F., France:—Will you please convey to the members of your Society my gratitude for the very generous supply of pyjamas, bandages, and swabs which I have received from Mrs. de Foelblangen (?). I had the pleasure of inspecting the two cases yesterday, and it rejoiced my heart to see the supply of bandages! I was Matron of No. 2 London General Hospital and was selfish enough to ask Mrs. de Foelblangen to send me this gift. I have just started this 1,040 bed hospital now and of course many things are required for it, and at the present moment every bed is full, and we require an enormous amount. There was a large box of ginger, which will be much enjoyed also. I am most grateful for everything sent.—Yours faithfully, (Signed) M. S. Hiddell, Matron.

From 94, Marlborough Mansions, West Hampstead, N.W.:—The two cases of most excellent cloth and bandages which your Society despatched in March last reached me only yesterday. Please convey my heartfelt thanks to all your workers for their very valuable gifts. The Matrons at the various hospitals tell me the roller bandages are the best they get from anywhere, and the eye bandages are greatly appreciated at No. 2 London General Hospital, Chelsea, where there are general wards set apart for eye cases. I have visited patients there very often, as they are taken first to Chelsea to be got into sufficiently good health before being passed on to St. Dunstan's for training. The blinded men I mentioned in last report were all at Chelsea—when I first knew them—Pte. Miller, Corp. Moss, Rifleman Beeley and Gunner Price. I sent six copies of the report to Lady May and hope you had one, but I enclose another now. I am posting parcels of roller bandages

DRESS IN PARIS.

Materials and Styles.

There is to be a regulation length of material for all cloth dresses this season: not quite five yards; so that the short, tight skirt is inevitable. The rule has been made to encourage economy in all materials which have to be imported or use up wool in home manufactures. But skirts need not be unbearably tight, especially as almost all cloth costumes are helped out with some other material, chiefly some silken tissue which allows for fullness.

In day dresses, coats, and skirts there is a general movement towards slim straight lines, but in most cases the wearer of a skirt can move freely. Some tailored skirts are very short, but the best avoid exaggeration. Short slim skirts which may be popular have some sort of drapery either at the side or in front in the form of an apron to the knees or a tunic which does not go all round. Buttons may be used a great deal for trimming; a long straight row of white and black check may have a long line of big pearl or bone buttons down the back, or a black or dark blue dress in some fine material may be trimmed with a long closely set row of buttons and imitation buttonholes in sashes down the front and up the back; carried out in blue and white or black and white, to match the dress. Some coats show almost a waist line; they are all long and without any fullness in the basques. The collars are soft and pliable, but do not wholly envelop the chin. They close up and are warm-looking and comfortable, but the collar does not dominate the coat.

Velvet in black and grey and other dark shades is worn a good deal, and the many sorts of dark materials in soft cloths which go by different names each season, though they have changed little since they were known as ratine. They have appeared as velourine, duvetyn, and under several other names, but the materials have changed less than the names. Made up with satin, or with velvet or with fur, they are in favour for general wear. Cheviote, serge, and jersey are also worn, although jersey is not what it was, and woolen jersey is not likely to be used much. The little dress worn under a long coat is made in all sorts of materials, including those mentioned, satin, crepe georgette, mousseline de soie, a very soft floating silk, and in most cases a combination of two of these. Much crepe de soie, mousseline de soie, tulle, and such like veillings are used on little dresses, as well as on dinner dresses and tea-gowns, for chiffon is a precious product, as it lightens a heavy material and saves a handsome one from looking pompous.

Another revival is the round décolleté of early Victorian days for full evening dress, with a slim and long skirt falling below the ankles, and some chiffon draperies over it. One sort recalls the old sheath gown, and another the short dress with the long train in tulle or mousseline, shaped after the Watteau model. It suggested grace and volume to a silhouette that might have looked too slim. The slim, longer evening dress with floating draperies, low décolleté, no sleeves beyond a strap, swathed bodice and a sash tied low behind, is graceful when there is no exaggeration, and so are the cross-over bodices ending in a sash knotted low behind for simple dinner frocks or elaborate afternoon dresses. A cross-over waistcoat of soft ivory satin in a black velvet dress, slipped through to tie in a broad sash behind, looks well. A hint of a roll collar at the back of the head carries the note of white satin near the face, and a few old paste buttons trimming the cross over in front add to the distinction.

Waists are negligible in modern dress, and are often only indicated vaguely with a line of narrow ribbon about half an inch wide, tied in a bow with rather long ends. Another waist-belt is the sash which begins high either at the side or in front and at once droops away until it is caught up into a knot either at the side or the back halfway down the skirt. Such a sash is often lined with a white silk lined with black, or a

ALLIES' MORE STRINGENT POLICY.

Tightening the Rope on Germany.

London, October 11.

Dutch newspapers appear to accept fairly philosophically the stoppage of commercial telegrams which is the new form of pressure exercised by the Allies. The stoppage applies to all commercial cables between Allied countries and Holland. Dutch business men are much perturbed and are likely to urge the Government to comply with the British demands.

Now that the whole world is becoming increasingly concerned in the war, directly or indirectly, the Allies are no longer hesitating to adopt stringent measures for the furtherance of their policy of shortening the war by hurting the enemy to the utmost, utilising for themselves all reasonable methods, even though neutrals are temporarily inconvenienced. The extreme tightening of the blockade, the commandeering of foreign ships, the stopping of telegrams and bunkering facilities are symptoms of this policy.

NATIONAL SERVICE.

Why Mr. N. Chamberlain Resigned.

The Parliamentary correspondent of the Observer writes:—

Mr. Neville Chamberlain has officially resigned from the Ministry, but the National Service Department goes on. The latter fact must be accounted to Mr. Chamberlain for success in organisation, as far as it goes. The National Service Department has not been the failure of the other Departments made out, or other Departments would not have been so keen to capture part of its organisation and the Department itself would not have been continued. What failure there has been in the co-ordinating of its activities with those of other Departments into whose domains those activities extended.

It would be too much to say, however, that Mr. Neville Chamberlain resigned because he could not accomplish all that he set out to do, for he had never been given the chance to carry out a consistent programme in any department of his work. From the beginning he has been the sport of expediency, as interpreted and applied by other members of the Ministry. He had no definite policy of his own in regard to the National Service, as well as to his chief development—subsidisation. Government labour, subsidies, agricultural, and so on, but no direction was given to any of these ideas to fruition, owing to the change of policy dictated by causes external to his Department. Being loyal to his colleagues in the Ministry, he has accepted these checks and disappointments without public protest; and, being a proud man, he has disdained to defend himself from attacks upon his Department and his real or supposed policy based upon circumstances over which he had no control.

Mr. Chamberlain has not quarrelled with the Government about recruiting. On the contrary, he probably would have been able to accommodate the requirements of the War Office in this respect, and to produce a combination scheme providing for the raising of men from essential industries, and of substituting others of a lower physical standard from the National Service "pool" of labour. What really determined his resignation was the way in which he and the Department were dealt with in the matter of military labour released for work on the land. It is a story too complicated to go into now. It is sufficient to say that after the Government had assented in May to a scheme arranged between the Departments of War, Agriculture, and National Service, whereby the National Service Department was to control this labour, the War Office in July declined to recognise it, and substituted the Board of Agriculture as the authority to carry out the allocation of this class of labour, and the Government withdrew the Ministry of Policy. Mr. H. H. Kitchener, the Director of the Agricultural Section, and all the other officials of that section resigned, and Mr. Chamberlain resigned.

YARN MARKET.

A Brighter Outlook Reported.

Messrs. Polisthwaite and Kotwall, in their report dated October 12, state:—

It is now more than two months since we ceased issuing our fortnightly circulars, the last being dated 3rd August. On that occasion we reported that the dealers, having entered into heavy commitments at topmost prices, were anxiously watching the negotiations then in progress between the Bombay exporters and shipowners for tonnage. Soon after, it became known that definite arrangements had been made for the movement of stocks: awaiting shipment. At the same time, the raw material suddenly assumed a retrograde movement, while silver began soaring upwards. All these factors at once told their tale upon our market, and prices commenced tumbling down at an alarming speed. Under these circumstances, we deemed it advisable in the interests of the trade to discontinue our reports for the time being.

In the past fortnight, matters appear to be happily adjusting themselves, and we are glad to resume our issues under improved market conditions. The advance of silver being arrested, and the rapid rise of the raw material have both produced a more optimistic feeling, thus affording the native dealers a much needed opportunity of working off some of their former purchases.

It must be said to the credit of the foreign importers that, in order to avert a catastrophe, such as that which overtook our market some ten years ago, they refrained for a period of two months from effecting new sales, thus rendering material assistance to the dealers and enabling them to clear off portions of their outstanding contracts.

Total Sales 2,000 bales; Unsold Stock 15,000 bales; Bargain in chine hand 20,000 bales.

Shanghai.—This market was reported active in the early part of the fortnight, but later advices indicate a more quiet tone.

Japanese Yarns.—The following are latest quotations:—490 bales Nagasaki No. 20s at $207/220; 3 Horses No. 16s at $200; 3 Horses No. 20s at $220; 2,000 bales Yellow Jow No. 20s at $195/210; Seton No. 10s at $168; Seton No. 20s at $225; Blue Fish No. 20s at $220.

Raw Cotton.—No Stocks. Quotation:—Bengal at $45 to $50; Chinese at $47 to $75 per picul.

ROBBERS NEAR WAI-CHOW.

Our Canton correspondent writes:—

A new arrival from Waichow states that there is a great number of robbers settling down in the Po-Tam channel, around Tung Koon District. Vessels that pass through this channel are about 60 in number every day. Those that pass this channel to Waichow are required to pay $5.00 while others to Shik Lung and Canton are to pay $2.00 to the robbers on each of the trips. After the money has been handed over a pass in the form of a small triangular banner will be given by the robbers. Four boats, towed by sampans running between Canton and Waichow are seized by the robbers to pay $1,000 each month and four sampans $1,000 each month. The robbers are soldiers of that locality who are not allowed to leave the district as they are afraid of the Chinese authorities. They are now in the district of Waichow and are in the district of Waichow.

AUSTRIAN KAISER IN
SORE STRAITS.His Father's Coffin "Exploited" Recalled.

Zurich, Aug. 6.—The news telegraphed from Vienna that the Austrian Socialist leader Pernerstorfer has been twice summoned to Court to have private audience of the Emperor Charles recalls the affair in which Pernerstorfer was nearly murdered by the Emperor's father, the late Archduke Otto.

The affair happened in 1895, and was the sequel to one of the most disgraceful of the many scandals with which the Austrian Emperor's father, the late Archduke Otto, was connected. The story is well known. Riding one day in the country, Archduke Otto met the funeral procession of a poor peasant, whose relatives and friends were following his body to the grave. Archduke Otto, who was accompanied by several officers, compelled the bearers to put down the coffin in the centre of the road, in order that he might have the pleasure of jumping over it on his horse. This he did several times, backwards and forwards, whilst the mourners looked on indignant and helpless. Archduke Otto and his friends then continued their ride.

Herr Pernerstorfer, who at that time was the only Socialist member of the Austrian Chamber of Deputies, brought the scandal to light in Parliament, and denounced Archduke Otto from the rostrum of the Chamber as a blackguard. His courageous attack on one of the most prominent members of the Imperial family caused a tremendous sensation.

The next day Pernerstorfer was found in his flat lying on the floor nearly dead. His servant had been decoyed out of the house and during her absence one or more unknown persons had got into the flat and beaten Pernerstorfer to the point of death. When the servant came back she found the Socialist deputy lying in a pool of blood, and for many weeks afterwards he lay helpless as a result of the brutal assault.

Police investigations were made, but they were speedily terminated, because it was found that Archduke Otto had been the perpetrator of the outrage. It was also discovered that the late Archduke Francis Ferdinand, although he had taken no part in the coffin incident, nevertheless resented the public attack on an Imperial Archduke so keenly that he aided and abetted his brother in the assault on Pernerstorfer.

It is one of the curious ironies of fate that Archduke Otto's son should now be appealing to Pernerstorfer to stand by the Imperial family and help him in safeguarding his throne.—Wireless Press.

HEROIC SCHOOL-
MISTRESS.Taught in Rheims Cellar During Bombardment.

Paris, Aug. 7.—Mlle. Fourcaux, the heroic schoolmistress of Rheims, who continued to teach her young charges in a cellar during the bombardment of the city, which still suffers more or less intensely from German shells, was warmly applauded to-day by her fellow teachers at a congress in Paris of friendly societies connected with the scholastic profession. A moving reference was made to the large number of schoolmasters who "have fallen gloriously on the field of honour in defence of the country."

Women workers have readily found employment in France during the war in many departments formerly reserved to men. Their activity now extends to the Hotel de Ville and other municipal offices controlled by M. Daladier, Prefect of the Seine, who has given clerical posts to 2,000 wives or daughters of soldiers.

Many of these, who have now become widows or orphans, would have been unable to subsist on their meagre pensions. In the city service their earnings average six francs daily, and to this is added a further one franc 40 centimes daily to meet the increased cost of living. The women have given complete satisfaction to their employers, and will be pardoned even after the war, and then their independence is assured.

BRITISH INTERESTS IN CHINA.

A Home Paper's Observations.

The annual meeting of the China Association used to be a somewhat perfunctory performance, limited very largely to the election of officers and other necessary business. The interesting speeches on affairs in China and the work of the Association there were reserved for the annual dinner. Owing to the war, however, that very popular function has been abandoned for the last few years, but we have been partially compensated for that loss by the full and admirable statement made at the recent annual meeting by the Chairman, Mr. F. Anderson, which have enabled the members of the Association and, through the Press, all interested in the China trade, to learn a great deal more about the progress of British interests in that country than was conveyed in the reports. Incidentally we are glad to learn that Mr. Anderson has consented to retain the chairmanship for at least another year, and the meeting readily assented to the necessary change in the rule to legalize his position. There is an obvious advantage in the arrangement, since Mr. Anderson holds in his hands all the threads of the work of the Association, while there are many subjects concerning which negotiations are not yet concluded. In his interesting speech moving the adoption of the report, he touched on many matters of great moment to all concerned with the progress of Anglo-Chinese trade. As an "old China hand" he did not dogmatize on the political situation in that country, but he had little trouble in showing that the true interests of the Chinese Republic were bound up with the Allied cause. He hinted at what a triumphant Germany would mean for China, and remarked that the Chinese would make a pretty shrewd guess as to the kind of compensation which Germany would demand from China for "daring to look askance at a German," for having the audacity to challenge the right of Germany to sink neutral shipping on the high seas at sight, for suspending diplomatic relations, and for seizing German ships. One would have thought, said Mr. Anderson, that with even the bare possibility of having to meet such a contingency all patriotic Chinese would have done everything in their power to suppress internal dissension and to organize the resources of their country in support of rights in its struggle with wrong. We can only trust that this view will commend itself to Chinese statesmen and officials, but recent events do not encourage us to be too hopeful that such a sane policy will be followed.

Coming to more strictly commercial matters, it was natural that Mr. Anderson should have something to say regarding the currency question in China which still remains to be solved. Various proposals have been put forward, but owing to political stringency nothing definite has yet been attempted. Mr. Anderson observes that while we are accustomed to criticize Chinese currency, there is this to be said for China, that the basis of her standard has always been a certain weight of silver of recognized purity, and notwithstanding all the theories of the West, silver has never lost faith in standard countries throughout the long years of depression caused by the demoralization of silver in the West. While the Chairman of the China Association had nothing definite to suggest as to what shape currency reform in that country should take, he raised the very large question as to whether it may not be advisable in conjunction with our Allies to re-establish silver as a world currency. His contention is that war has once more shown the value and importance of silver, and that the huge expenditure in connection therewith may make it impossible for the gold standard to be maintained throughout the West. It is an interesting suggestion, but raises many controversial points which we will not attempt to discuss on the present occasion. Mr. Anderson was on surer ground when he referred to the injustice which had been occasioned in connection with the prohibition of China tea. In this matter the Board of Trade have taken up what, on the face of it, seems to be a most arbitrary and illogical attitude. The facts are simple. At the time when the prohibition was announced, without any warning certain quantities of tea which had already been paid for by British firms in China were in course of shipment. On arrival in London the Board of Trade refused to allow any of it to be delivered, and it has all been impounded at the London Docks for over two months. Their reason for refusing to pass the tea is that it was not paid for by the consignees in England before the date of prohibition. They said that if the firms here had paid for the tea they would not have declined to allow it to be delivered. The result is that it cannot be sold on the market, and the capital invested in it is withdrawn from trade. As Mr. Anderson points out, it was clearly impossible for a firm in London to pay for tea before the date of prohibition, which no notice was given.

GERMANS' CURFEW PERMITS

Members of "Mischievous Club" Keep Late Hours.

From extracts taken from the minutes of the Polish Club it appeared, said Mr. Muskett, prosecuting two officials at Marylebone that the club was established for the purpose of throwing every obstacle in the way of the conscription or enlistment of friendly aliens.

The officials charged were Elar Dudie, proprietor and treasurer, and Anthony Gasiorowski, secretary, and they were summoned for allowing the club to be kept open in contravention of the Clubs Act of 1915. There was also a summons against the secretary for permitting the consumption of drink after 9 p.m. on a Sunday.

Mr. Muskett, for the Police Commissioner, said the club was a meeting place for German, Russian, and Austrian Poles, and was kept open without a licence. The Commissioner of Police had proposed its registration. When the police visited the place on Sunday, July 15, 21 women and 28 men were found on the premises, and the majority were dancing. They were nearly all Russian Poles, but two were Germans, who had "curfew" permits, allowing them to be out till 11.30 and 12 at night.

Mr. Bingley expressed the opinion that the club was a very mischievous society, and having declared it to be an illegal club and prohibited the use of the premises during the war, he fined Dadie ten guineas and five guineas each, and Gasiorowski £10 and the same costs.

HONGKONG DEFENCE CORPS.

Administrative Orders issued by Major H. A. Morgan, Administrative Commandant, state:—

Correspondence.—When a man is once called up for Military Service and not exempted altogether by H. E. the Governor under Clause 4 of the Military Service Ordinance 1917, application for exemption from parades etc., or modification of duty is not to be made to the Hon. Colonial Secretary but to the Administrative Commandant.

The parade contained in yesterday's orders for Right Half Company at Belohara Battery (Range Takora) Class only, at 5.30 p.m. on Monday, the 15th inst., is deleted.

POLICE RESERVE ORDERS.

Orders issued to-day by Mr. F. O. Jenkins, D.S.P. (R.), state:—

Band and Orchestra.—An Orchestra Practice is ordered for Monday, October 15, at 8 p.m. punctually.

The Band Practices ordered for Tuesday, October 16, and Friday, October 19, are hereby cancelled.

Musketry.—The Musketry Course 1917-1918 is provisionally fixed to start on Sunday, December 2.

Therefore, the claim of the Board of Trade is equivalent to saying that they can at any moment hold up and temporarily confiscate capital invested in trade without giving any warning. It is to be hoped that in future a more reasonable view will be taken up by the authorities, and more consideration given to traders in such times of difficulty as prevail to-day. Finally, all connected with the China trade will be in agreement with what Mr. Anderson said as to trading with the enemy after the war. Most people are agreed that never again must the Germans be allowed to revert to the old positions which they had occupied in our trade at home and in the Far East before the war. Their methods in China have been fully exposed, and, in the words of Mr. Anderson, "if our people are wise they will never again help to undermine our trade in China, which is now re-established on a sounder basis than it has been for many years, entirely owing to the absence of the so-called 'reliable' German."

"THE FANTASTICS."

The New Programme a Great Success.

"The Fantastics" improve on acquaintance, as they showed on the occasion of their first change of programme last night. There was again quite a well-filled house, and although, owing to the length of the programme, no encore was conceded, those present showed their appreciation of the artists' efforts in a unanimous manner. Indeed, so loud and prolonged was the applause at times that it became no easy matter to proceed with the programme. It was an evening of undisturbed enjoyment, and the audience was soon on the very best of terms with the clever and talented performers. There was not an old number in the whole catalogue, the change of programme being complete in every respect. Of course, Miss Billie Seaton was well to the fore and she made distinct hits in all her items, especially in "Suzanne" and "The Cat Came Back," while her child number "Six Times Six" was a particularly droll and taking re-creation. For versatility as a vocalist and monologist Miss Hilda Feistfeld could not easily be excelled. She was in great form last night and scored some of the biggest successes of the evening. In "Angela Green" she was decidedly happy, introducing a number of topical allusions, while her country stories were very cleverly told. Another triumph was secured by Mr. Leonard Nelson, the star comedian. His first item "Give me your Kind Applause," in which Hongkong's glories were lauded to the skies, was a great success, while his own composition, "Mr. Boose," was very effectively handled. He has already become a great favourite here. Miss Nellie Black had quite a big share of the evening's honours. Her association with Miss Fern French in a number of popular duets had most happy results, while her violin playing and clever imitations of various instruments were of the first order. Miss Elsie Black and Mr. Bert Wiles gave great delight in their musical mélange, while Miss Ivy Aldous and Mr. Fred Kealey did some wonderful trick dancing, the former's "Kangaroo Hop" being a very striking number. Mr. Ray Traynor played all sorts of tricks at the piano, while his American war song, "Over There," brought him much applause from the audience. The programme concluded with a smart knockabout turn, "The Chinese Laundry," by Messrs. Redhead Wilson and Fred Kealey. The whole evening was most enjoyable and was a tribute to the skill and capabilities of the performers.

"The Fantastics" will present the same delightful entertainment to-night, at 9.15, and one of the outstanding features of the evening will doubtless be the clever character-song, "Mr. Boose," Leonard Nelson's popular composition which proved such a big success last evening. Mr. Shipman announces a complete change of programme for Monday night.

Sanitary Board.

There is only formal business to come before the Sanitary Board at Tuesday's meeting.

The Medical Board.

His Excellency the Governor has appointed Mr. Kenneth Hutchinson Digby, M.B., B.S., F.R.C.S., to be a Member of the Medical Board, with effect from the 10th October, 1917, vice Mr. Walter Leslie Pattenden whose term of office has expired.

Another Secret Wireless Plant Discovered.

Argentine navy officers on August 15th reported the discovery of a secret wireless station near Oberhut. It is believed that it has been used for the purpose of communicating with suspicious vessels which have been sighted at different times in the south Atlantic.

WOMEN IN THE ARMY.

Pay and Service in the Auxiliary Corps.

A statement will be issued shortly by the Ministry of Labour of the position as regards the recruiting of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, telling women where to apply and when and what numbers will be wanted immediately for the different sections.

Widespread interest is being taken in the drastic substitutions which are to take place in certain units, formations, and offices administered by the Army Council at home, at the base, and on the lines of communications overseas, in addition to those that have already been made. The approximate basis of substitution is four women for three men. For instance, four women with technical knowledge are regarded as equivalent to three technical soldiers in the Royal Flying Corps and the Army Service Corps. The women cooks, who have introduced many reforms in cooking since they took over base kitchens, consider that in their case the basis should be reversed.

The women march to their work in the morning and march back again in their dinner hour. They are subject to strict discipline, but they understand this before going to France. The women who are already out in France have lived up to their uniform so well that only three of them have had to be sent back from France for disciplinary reasons, and these not very serious offences. One of the first batches sent out committed a technical offence against discipline out of the fervour of their sense of justice. They found that beds had been provided for them in a hut which had previously been occupied by men, who only had mattresses. They took the beds out, folded them up and used only the mattresses. It happened that a number of wounded soldiers had just been brought to a hospital near by, where the beds proved very useful.

Only one fortnight in a year furlough is given. The terms of service are for a year or the duration of the war, whichever is longer. The women have to go through a medical examination as severe as that of the men, as in the hut where six women would be accommodated at close quarters it is advisable to have all fear of contagion removed. No promise is given to send out friends together, but where it is possible this is done and it humanises the not very interesting life led by the average woman in the Army Auxiliary Corps in France. So far the most difficult kind of worker to get is the charwoman, who is needed for scrubbing and washing up. The women who do this kind of work are usually old and with many home ties, and not likely to be able to leave home.

The pay of the administrative appointments is not magnificent, though offering a living wage. Mrs. Chalmers-Watson, who is chief controller, was the first Scotswoman to obtain the degree of M.B., and is a sister of Sir Eric Geddes. The pay is £500 per annum without quarters; the overseas controller, Mrs. Gwynne Vaughan, receives £450 and quarters; the deputy-controller receives £400 without quarters, the section controllers, of whom there are three—Mrs. Leach, (cooking), Miss Christobel Ellis, (Motor Transport), and Mrs. Andrews, (clerical)—receive £300 without quarters; the area controllers, who are attached to the headquarters of commands and to certain areas and base ports overseas, receive £200 and quarters; the clothing controller receives £175 and quarters; the unit administrator in charge of hostels receives £150 and quarters and if in charge of more than 300 girls, £175.

Of the N.C.O.'s and rank and file the forewoman telegraphist is the best paid, receiving 40s. per week. A qualified forewoman motor-driver mechanic receives 30s. and a shorthand typist 25s.

ENTENTE'S OFFER TO GREECE.

Ex-King's Refusal to Make War on Turkey.

Athens, Aug. 23.—M. Venizelos to-day laid before the Bureau of the Chamber of Deputies which he addressed to King Constantine in August, 1914, when after pointing out that the tendencies of the Crown were in contradiction with the views of the responsible Government, he sent in his resignation. In the opening part of this letter M. Venizelos referred to a conference which had been held between Admiral Kerr and King Constantine and to the declarations which he (M. Venizelos) had made to the representatives of the Triple Entente, with the King's authorisation.

We cannot (added M. Venizelos) undertake an offensive war against Turkey so long as we are not assured of the co-operation of Bulgaria, or, at least, of her absolute neutrality. But to declare that in no case, even presupposing this, are we disposed to declare war against Turkey before she attacks us, is manifestly contrary to the well-understood interests of the nation. We must not delude ourselves. Turkey has for a long time been waging against us a war which has never been declared. Two hundred and fifty thousand Greeks have already been driven from Turkey, and their property, valued at £25,000,000, has been confiscated.

In participating in a war against Turkey in alliance with Great Britain, France, and Russia, under the condition already mentioned of the active co-operation of Bulgaria, or a complete guarantee of her neutrality, we have no reason and no interest in also declaring war against the Central European Powers. But if they consider us as belligerents, whatever may be the issue of the war in Central Europe, the predominance in the East of the group of which Great Britain forms part will be complete.

But the fact which I believe arouses in the mind of your Majesty and that of M. Straits tendencies, opposed to those which I support is the wish not to displease Germany by engaging in a war against Turkey with the assistance of the other Powers belonging to the Alliance against the Central Empire. When England, at the time of my journey to Europe last year, announced that she was ready to impose upon Turkey the Powers' decision regarding the Islands, even by the dispatch of an International Fleet, if Germany agreed to that proposal, the latter Power caused the plan to be abandoned by refusing to agree. Your Majesty is equally aware that when later on the Powers of the Triple Entente decided to use very severe language in the Note which was addressed to Turkey on the subject of the Islands, Germany interposed.

And to-day is it not Germany who is supporting the Turk's aims, giving him ships, money, rifles, equipment, and even officers? It is true that these preparations are more especially directed against Russia, but at the same time they are turned against us, since Germany, with the view of forcing us to violate our engagement with Serbia, is clearly threatening us with an attack on our rear by the Turks in case we should go to the help of Serbia when she is attacked by Bulgaria. . . . We know, even from the mouth of Count Quantz (the German Minister to Greece in 1914) that Germany, in agreement with the fixed ideas of Austria, is inclined, in the event of a complete victory, to create a Great Bulgaria, stretching as far as the Adriatic, to serve as a bulwark against Slavism, since the discovery recently made in Germany according to which the Bulgarians are not Slavs but Tartars.

Why, then, should we show ourselves so complaisant towards the Power that seeks to assist in every possible way the two principal enemies of Hellenism, the Bulgars and the Turks, and why should we remain indifferent towards those Powers who, after having called Greece into being, are to-day ready, in case of an attack on Turkey, to impose on us a peace dictated by their interests?

British Stubbornness.

The German Emperor, though he revelled us for two hours in an interview with an American—and paid £10,000 for the suppression of the interview—knows that the old tremendous British stubbornness in the face of an enemy survives. Stubbornness and discipline are fine supports of an ideal for which a nation has to fight. That thought may be commended to unwise men who would at this hour introduce port R. revolution. Russian men into one rank. Russia is looking to day, not to wrecking theories, but to a Karamsky, who puts down princes and prettlers, and a Korniloff, who trains his guns on men who sit in trench companies when they should be overlapping the parapets.
